Dr. Corinna Myers received a master's degree in public health from Virginia Tech and later graduated with her medical degree from Edward Via College of Osteopathic Medicine. She moved to North Carolina to complete her residency at the Cabarrus Family Medicine Residency Program. Dr. Myers is board certified in family medicine and currently practices in Concord, NC with clinical interests including public health, women's health, mental health, and working to provide wellness throughout each stage of a person's life. She is passionate about working with underserved populations and regularly volunteers on international mission trips. Dr. Myers has treated victims of human trafficking and has come to understand the complex needs of this vulnerable population. She is actively involved with the North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians and serves on their Advocacy Committee.

While she's not working, Dr. Myers enjoys spending time with her husband and their two rescue dogs, Charlie and Goose, reading, and enjoying the outdoors. She and her husband are avid Virginia Tech fans. She was appointed to the North Carolina Human Trafficking Commission by the Governor as the Healthcare Representative.
